

Non-Collaborative Community Responsive Research (NCCRR)

The following list of questions can help guide researchers toward best practice for non-collaborative community-responsive research in Lawrence.

- List the Principal Investigator (PI), principal contact, research project name and descriptive title, funding organization, and the initiative or opportunity title
- What are the research aims, methods, and time frame for your research project? Explain briefly
- What Lawrence individuals or entities have written letters of support for this research?
- Please explain why a collaborative partnership was not appropriate for this research
- Which individuals, institutions, and organizations will the study come in contact with in Lawrence?
- How will the study interact with Lawrence individuals and entities?
- How will these individuals and entities and the City of Lawrence benefit from this research?
- What resources will the study contribute to Lawrence?
- What resources will Lawrence contribute to the study?
- What is the process for ensuring communication and understanding with the individuals and entities that the study comes in contact with?
- How will language translation be accomplished?
- How will you communicate about the project to the public and other parties in Lawrence?
- What will be the opportunities for Lawrence individuals and entities, the public, and other parties to communicate with you?
- In what ways have Lawrence individuals and entities played a role or provided input in identifying, defining, and prioritizing questions for your research?
- What role have Lawrence individuals and entities played in designing the overall research protocol and deciding how the research questions will be answered?
- How will the ethical basis of the research be assessed and assured?
- Which Human Subjects Review Boards will review the proposed project?
- How will community ethical standards and concerns be represented in the research protocol and human subjects reviews?
- How will it be assured that Informed Consent forms and procedures are understandable to potential research subjects?
- How will you recruit participants?
- How will recruiters, liaisons and participants be compensated?
- Who will have access to the data and who will have control and/or ownership of the data?
- After the research has begun, if there are community concerns about the research process, how will the research project be responsive to these concerns?
- How will you disseminate the results of the research?
- How will research participants be made aware of results related to their participation?
- How will you share the results with the Lawrence community?
- How will the results be used to support new policy, program and research projects?

See the “Glossary of Research Terms” as needed for definitions of italicized items above.